New York is my one and only hometown. From time to time some stranger will ask me how I can bear to live in that crazy city. If I'm tired, I just shrug and say I like it here. Sometimes, if I'm in a foul mood, I will say I live in New York because it is the centre of the universe, just to spite them. They have no idea what they are missing!

My sister lives here and I guess I want to be near her, and her husband, who is like a brother to me, and her son, whom I secretly think of as at least partly my own. The old men make a humming sound of approval and nod their hairless heads in reply. A good girl. A family person.

And I do want to be near my sister, as I always have been. We have our rituals. Every Saturday morning, unless she is covering the Olympics, the Oscars, or a disaster, my sister and I go running together in the park and have breakfast either at her apartment or at the Greek diner down the street from mine. She will tell you she is forced to set a slower pace because I don't exercise enough. She sees this as evidence of my essential laziness. I see it as emblematic of our relationship. Our aunt Maureen says that I was a baby so plump and phlegmatic that the only reason I learned to walk was so I could follow my older sister. Some of my earliest memories are of wandering down a street trying to find my sister's hiding place.

Even this time, I am a little breathless running with Megan on a Saturday morning. But I'm accustomed to it now. "Listen and learn," she has said to me since we were in high school, and I always have.
